PRESIDENT ARTHUR.

Chester A. Arthur retires from the Presidential chair with the verdict of the country in his favor. His administration has not been marked by great contention, or notable activity. But these are the best evidences of good administration of public affairs. It is by no means to be assumed that because quiet prevails, the official head of the Government is spiritless. One of the errors into which many people fell regarding the Hayes administration was to estimate it as little character, because it had not agitated the nation by momentous schemes. That it was undisturbed by the waves of great activity testifies simply to non-necessity for agitation, and the prosperity and content of the nation. General Arthur has made a good President. He has maintained his party faithfully, but has not been a subservient tool of party, or permitted partisan claims to interfere with the welfare of the country. He will enjoy the distinction of having been the last President in the unbroken rule of the Republican party in the first great cycle of its existence. That party came into life at the command of necessity and in time to rescue the nation from the misrule of the Democracy, which had placed the Union at the mercy of factions, and its head the man who was to be the chief of the Democracy.

After the re-nomination of the members of President Cleveland's Cabinet were received, the Senate went into executive session and remained about fifteen minutes, when a motion to adjourn was made and carried. It was voted to adjourn to confirm the Cabinet, and it was referred to a committee, and it was voted to adjourn to the Senate adjourned. Senator Ridgely thought it was necessary for the President to be present, and he was present, and the bill was referred to him.

He has maintained his party's faith with dignity, but has not been a subservient tool of party, or permitted partisans claims to intervene between himself and duty. He will enjoy the distinction of having been the last President in the unbroken rule of the Republican party in the first great cycle of its existence. That party came into life at the command of necessity and in time to rescue the nation from the misrule of the Democracy, which had placed the Union at the mercy of factions, and country by country, upon the soil of the Republic beyond dispute, that there is no right of secession. It seated two Presidents who fell the victims of assassination, and safely tided the country over the troubled waters of those tragic events. To quote a recent observer for a single critic, it successfully waged a mighty war against secession, liberated millions of slaves, restored peace and order to a rebellious section, contracted a great national debt and well nigh paid it off, substituted specific payments for an inflated paper currency, brought up the revenue to an unprecedented height, and imposed a tariff that, which although it might ultimately breed trouble, had brought up manufacturing to a bulk and value never known before. No man so suddenly inducted into office as was President Arthur has filled it with more credit, or adhered more faithfully and honestly to the general policy that made his party what it is, and which has given it the courage to face all emergencies, and the ability to prove equal to them. He comes into office with bitter prejudices against him within his party; but he outlived them all, and restored the confidence and esteem not only of the whole Republican party, but of the whole people. He goes back to private life distinguished as having been one of the Presidents owing distinction to a party that held the reins of government for a quarter of a century, and safely guided the country through the most troublous times known to its history. The reentry of President Arthur therefore marks a great national event, and closes the most important chapter in our history since the Union of States was consummated. Review of that remarkable record, so full of great events and great results that made their sealable mark upon a civilization, must be deferred for the present.

OF PARTY TASKMASTERS.

In a certain part of his inaugural President Cleveland speaks to awaken in the people a lively sense of the dignity, importance and responsibility of American citizenship by calling to their attention that for each one to do his duty is a citizen. Quiescence in public affairs is not good citizenship, and with this truth President Cleveland is fully charged, for his declaration: That who takes oath to obey the Constitution of the United States, and only assumes the solemn obligation which every patriot citizen on the farm, in the workshop, in the office, in the school, in the church, in the home, shares with him, The Constitution, which protects his birthright, my countrymen, is yours. The time for a time is yours, the surface which executes the will of freemen is yours, the laws and institutions of the State and the nation are yours. The meeting to the State Capitol and the National Capitol, is yours. Your every voter, as surely as your every citizen, is yours. The people of the gold bug Association of New York was at its back and demanding his nomination by the suffrage of the people.—Santa Cruz sentinel. If fate to the very few great men is this world to live to witness their own characters and the thrones of power crowned with laurels. Upon these mistakes shall the Republi- can party make capital, which with the capital already at hand in the shape of glorious principles and a matchless record, shall come to a grand victory in 1886.—[San Jose Times-Mercury.]

DOMESTIC NEWS.

The Extra Session of the Senate.

Washington, March 5th.—The public galleries of the Senate were again to-day crowded to their utmost limits, and long before noon a crowd gathered about every door to see the Vice-President in his seat. The Senate closed which Captain Biddle, with his usual tact, adjourned yesterday, had recovered the lost time. Promptly at 12 o'clock the Vice-President entered from the door on the left of the president's desk, and the Vice-President of the Senate, having come in from the floor, followed him. The galleries applauded Hendricks, which was the first time that the Vice-President had been received in the Senate with such a unanimous ovation. The Vice-President, who had been seated in the chair, and was again greeted with plaudits by the occupants of the galleries, he called the Senate to order, and then adjourned to the Committee of the Lutheran Memorial Church of this city. The galleries applauded Hendricks, which was the first time that the Vice-President had been received in the Senate with such a unanimous ovation. LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

PROBABLE A HOAX.—Sig. Korn sends to the Record-Union from Franklin a scrap of paper, which he says was picked up by a laborer on the lower Stockton road, between Franklin and Sacramento. Both sides of it were covered with writing, in which the spelling poor and punctuation erratic, but the subject of the paper is a man who wants a situation. Home sewing machines. Home sewing machines, skates, etc. For Sale—Block of Korn street. Agents wanted—801 K street. L. K. Hammer—Sheet music.

THE IRISH SOCIAL CLUB was attacked last evening by the large attendance of young ladies and gentlemen upon the club's first birthday, given at Jacobs' Hall. As many were dressed in green, it was immediately, and all seemed bent on enjoyment. A well-arranged programme of dances and excellent music by Fisch & Watson's orchestra furnished opportunity, and the floor was filled at all times. The club is efficient and full of life, and the members are a credit to the city.
